REGIONAL FARM MEETING HELD

Missouri Flat Hall Scene Of Day-Long Gathering Of Six-County Farm Bureau

Approximately fifty farm men and women of the sixth region of the California Farm Bureau Federation met at Missouri Flat Community Hall Friday morning for a day-long session.

C. J. Rolph, of Nevada County, regional director, was in charge and representatives were present from Butte, Yuba, Sutter, Nevada and Placer Counties with a large representation from El Dorado County led by James A. Irving, county president.

Farm Advisor Lilley and the farm advisors of the member counties, together with specialists of the University Agricultural Extension Service and representatives of some state governmental departments shared in the meeting.

Among the university men in attendance was B. J. Jones, former county farm advisor.

Mr. Jones led a discussion of "Range Improvement and Irrigated Pastures."

The afternoon session was to hear a talk by Ray B. Wiser, state Farm Bureau president on "The Immediate Future for Agriculture" as a principal feature.

At noon, under the guidance of a committee of ladies of the Missouri Flat Farm Center and the community at large, a chicken dinner was served to the members in attendance.

Probation For Cabin Burglar

Three-Month Sentence In County Jail Made Special Condition

Charley Hinson, 28, who had pleaded guilty to the burglary of the Lake Tahoe cabin of Buford McPhail, was granted probation in Superior Court Friday morning on the special condition that he serve three months in the county jail. The probation will be for a period of two years.

The court found that the burglary was a crime of the second degree and stated when it developed that a gun which Hinson took as part of his loot was loaded, that the finding might have been different had this circumstance been known to the court before the finding was made.

The defendant's statement to the probation officer that the gun was not loaded was at variance with the statement in court by Sheriff George M. Smith that the gun was loaded at the time it was taken from the cabin. Admitting this to be true, Hinson said he, himself had taken the shells from the .38 calibre pistol and protested that he had taken the gun as part of the loot and not "with the idea of doing anybody any harm."

Probation Officer Charles W. Ball's report on the defendant revealed he had done no work for the past five years, was a half-orphan at five years of age and his father (Continued on Page 3)

What was arranged as a happy family swimming party had a sad conclusion Thursday evening when Richard Spencer, 13, son of Mrs. Mildred Spencer, of Placerville, fell from the rumble seat of the car in which he was riding and sustained a fractured skull.

The accident took place on Coloma Street about fifty yards north of Bee Street while the family, with friends, was enroute to the American River.

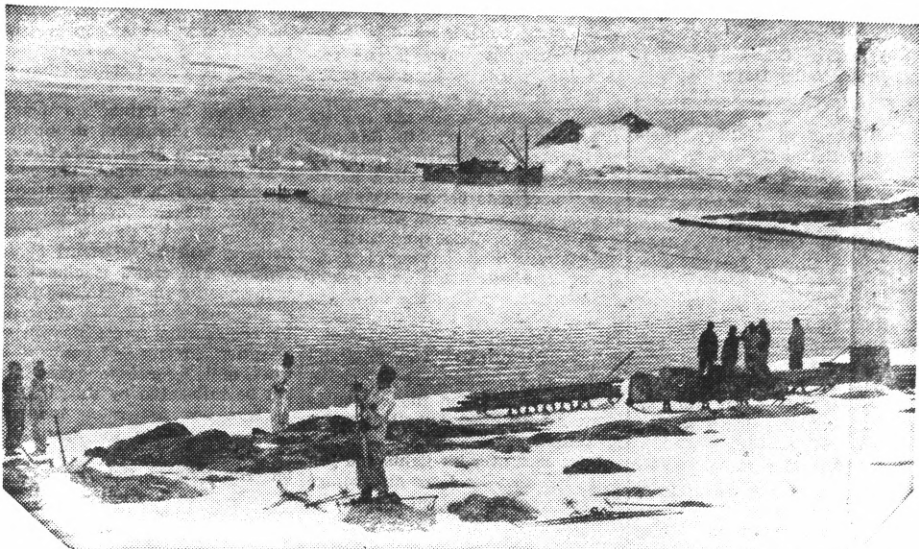

Richard is a patient at the Sanatorium and was reported by relatives as resting easily Friday afternoon.

5 Dead, 30 Injured In Hospital Fire

CINCINNATI, O. (AP)—Fire swept through a four-story section of St. Francis Hospital today, killing five women and trapping 30 persons on upper floors. At least seven others were injured.

The fire broke out on the first floor shortly after midnight. Firemen carried several persons down ladders to safety.

By JANE VOILES

What has become of that unsalable quality, British supremacy? What kept the Chamberlain group in power? Has the conception of Empire dwindled to a matter of preserving the investments of the upper class in England? Lost to its historic duties can England escape again and regain her place in the sun? Will she do her stuff and show the world?

In "The Long Watch Over England," Eugene and Arline Lohrke answer these and many more vital questions that are puzzling the world today. A continuation of their other book "Night Over England," this volume deals with the period from the time of Munich to the outbreak of the war. The Lohrkes believe that what is happening in England has a crucial meaning for America today.

Just to refresh your memory, territorial England is smaller than Sweden, yet Sweden's population is 6,000,000, while England's is 45,000,000 with 80 per cent of it clustered in towns and 25 per cent of that 80 in London and its suburbs. Given a good car, you can drive from one end of England to the other in a day.

In their rather unique method of investigation, the Lohrkes worked from the bottom up. They have spent most of their time over a period of years on a farm in Sussex living the authentic life of English villagers. Wherever there were great landed estates, they discovered, remnants of the old feudal loyalty still exists. But unfortunately the traditions that accompanied that loyalty do not exist. The loyalty of the workman to his master may still be there but the master's sense of responsibility, the "noblesse oblige," has practically vanished. Many an old squire would turn in his grave to see "gates rotten and hanging off their hinges, collapsing, roofs falling in." Plainly this is no longer the time when England did its work at home and still had vitality to over-run a quarter of the world.

A nation is as strong as its people. Now the villagers are in a sense trapped by the old proprietary hands. They can't shift for themselves since there is nothing to which they can turn. Fundamentally it comes down to the question:—what can take the place of a way of life that has perished?

Plans For War Through Winter Seen As Nazis Control Crops

By J. W. T. MASON

UNITED PRESS WAR EXPERT

Preparations for continuing the war into next winter are indicated by arrangements for placing all of France's forthcoming harvest of food supplies under control of the German government. No private distribution of the harvest is to be allowed, and all food is to be allotted at the source by the Hitler conquerors of France.

Rationing of food among the French people is reported to be strictly enforced with large supplies already being sent into Germany. If a quick conquest of Great Britain were regarded as certain by Hitler, arrangements to place French farms under complete military control, would be unnecessary.

It seems apparent that the Germans realize they must guard in advance against semi-famine conditions on the continent of Europe next winter as the result of the British blockade. Famine is Britain's ultimate instrument for bringing the war to an end favorable to the British Empire. If the German plans to invade England and cut off British food supplies end in a failure, there is little doubt that the war will last into next year, with winter becoming a formidable ally of the British fleet.

The continent will require at least 150,000,000 bushels of wheat importations this winter to prevent hunger preying on the people. Most of the grain must come via trade routes controlled by the British navy. Hitler, as the conqueror of the continent, will seize all food he can as tribute from conquered territory, to try to prevent disintegration within Germany. That will mean partial starvation for the victims of France's surrender, unless (Continued on Page Three)

FORTIFICATION OF FLEET AIR BASES ON EAST COAST ADVISED

WASHINGTON, (AP)—A house military affairs subcommittee recommended that the United States acquire and fortify fleet air bases in Nova Scotia and Bermuda to bolster Atlantic coast defenses which members described as "deplorably weak."

The sub-committee also proposed a progressive equipment replacement program, improvement of camouflage, new air fields suitably concealed and an increase in mobile anti-aircraft batteries.

The report said some present defenses are adequately protected from the sea but "not at all from bombs from planes."

"The latest types of guns are almost unprotected from fire from either sea or air," the report said. "One particularly noticeable feature was the almost total absence of any attempt to camouflage. We believe that every effort should be made to conceal the gun emplacements, magazines, tracks, observation points, etc."

SACRAMENTO CYCLIST HOME FOR RACES AFTER WAR ZONE EXPERIENCE

SACRAMENTO—Getting back into racing form after spending seven months in a British concentration camp in East Africa, Ewald Schnitzer of Sacramento has registered his entry with Frank J. Murray for the motorbike races in Sacramento Municipal Stadium tonight.

Schnitzer made his initial return to motorcycle racing tracks last Friday in Sacramento after being detained in Nairobi, Kenya Colony, where he had stopped on a racing tour of East Africa motorbike tracks. The American Consul there was able to obtain his release after seven months because previous to his visit to Africa, Schnitzer had taken out his first citizenship papers in this country. He was being held because of his German name.

Mrs. Ora Glasgow and her new-born daughter, Brenda Faye, are home from a Sacramento hospital.

Henry Chase, one of the leading farmers of Mariposa County, was a Placerville visitor Friday.

RABIES THREAT RISES AGAIN

Dogs Must Be Kept Up And When Downtown Must Be On Leash, Warning

Discovery of another instance of rabies among pets in the community brought the announcement from city officials Friday morning that dogs and cats of the community must be kept at home and that dogs must be on leash when in the business district.

Imposition again of the terms of the emergency pet quarantine ordinance was announced following receipt of word from the state laboratories at Berkeley reporting that a dog belonging to the H. M. Lumsden family which was killed last Tuesday positively had rabies.

The dog was killed and its head sent to the laboratories for analysis after the animal had bitten the small son of Mr. and Mrs. Lumsden, and also had bitten another dog in the family.

The animal's behavior indicated that it was not normal and as a precautionary measure it was slain. The laboratory report advised that any person bitten should be put under treatment.

At the regular July meeting the city council had indicated it would look with favor upon a general "let down" of the emergency quarantine restrictions so long as it appeared that the presence of rabies among the pets of the community had been eliminated.

The council was unwilling to repeal the emergency ordinance, however, having in mind the possibility of renewed outbreak of the infection.

Upon the receipt of the report Friday morning that the Lumsden dog had rabies infection, Chief of Police Ralph W. Jones asked that the public be advised through the newspaper that the terms of the ordinance will again be enforced.

Committee Asked To Plan Party

Red Cross Production Chairman Invites Civic Leaders To Meet Monday

Steps will be taken at a meeting of a county-wide committee to be held Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the guild hall of the Church of Our Saviour, to make plans for a large public card party for the benefit of the production department of the county Red Cross chapter.

Some of the women prominent in civic and social affairs in each rural district of the county and in Placerville, are being asked by Mrs. Edith Rantz, production chairman for the county Red Cross Chapter, to attend the meeting Monday at which the committee will organize.

It is hoped that the attendance at the meeting will be truly representative of the entire county to the end that the plans for the projected party may be carried to the far corners of the county and receive the support which the Red Cross production work deserves.

Mrs. Rantz reports that she has received the consent of parties in charge for the use of Marcus P. Bennett, Jr., Memorial Park for the party, with lighting at night, if the committee chooses to proceed in this form, and providing the date chosen may not conflict with the regularly scheduled use of the park.

One feature of the arrangements which make the proposed party attractive as an opportunity to assist the work of the local Red Cross chapter is that under the regulations, the entire proceeds of the party may be retained by the production department of the local Red Cross chapter for its work.

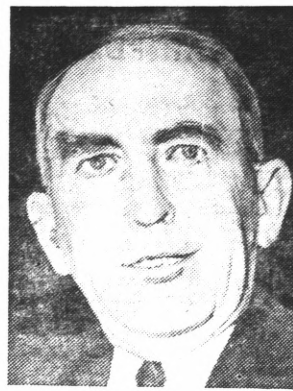

5 Days For Contempt In Divorce Matter

Farris Moody was adjudged in contempt of court Friday morning and was sentenced to five days in the county jail by Judge George H. Thompson.

Moody was in court under circumstances arising out of a divorce action in which he is a principal and in the settlement of which he had been ordered by the court to pay his wife $15 per month for the support of their minor child.

His failure to do this and the absence of circumstances offering a reasonable explanation for the failure placed him in contempt.

CABIN THEFTS SUSPECT HELD

Sacramento Carpenter Jailed For Series Of Canyon Home Lootings

Ben Pinedo, 30, Sacramento carpenter, was lodged in the county jail Thursday evening by Sheriff George M. Smith in connection with an investigation of a series of summer home burglaries in the vicinity of Camp Sacramento, in the American River Canyon.

Sheriff Smith said he found Pinedo camped in the Forty-Five Mile Forest Service public campground and from the camp, the sheriff alleged, the suspect has been raiding summer homes in the vicinity.

No great amount of loot has been taken from any cabin, the sheriff reported, although home owners have reported the loss of money, small household items and other articles.

The sheriff said he believes that from the investigation thus far, Pinedo is liable to a charge of burglary.

JAPAN SPOILING FOR TROUBLE IN SOUTH SEAS

SHANGHAI, (Copyright 1940 by United Press)—The Japanese army and navy have agreed on a program of vigorous expansion in East Asia and the South Seas regardless of the risk of colliding with British and American interests, a reliable Japanese source told the United Press today.

Army leaders drafted the program, the United Press informant said, and navy leaders have now agreed to support it.

As outlined, the programs calls for: Taking over the foreign concessions in China; an intensified blockade of Hong Kong; "penetrating" in what way was not clear, Borneo and the Netherlands East Indies. Thus the army-navy program would mean that with the mandated Caroline Islands, Japan would encircle the Philippines.

BRITAIN DOWNS 7 RAIDERS

Planes Of Axis Powers Loose Bombs From Scotland To Africa; Deaths Mount

LONDON, (AP)—British air and ground forces downed seven German planes today as swastika-marked squadrons swept over the Isles from the south coast of England to northeast Scotland in the most persistent air attack of the war.

Amidst frequent air alarms, the admiralty tightened anti-invasion precautions by ordering measures to disable any vessel likely to fall into German hands and the home ministry forbade the employment of aliens of any nationality in certain industries in certain sections without special permission.

German planes shot down today brought the losses among attacking forces to 31 planes during the past two days.

BY UNITED PRESS

A titanic struggle between the axis powers and the British Empire gathered momentum today on a land, sea and air front stretching from Scotland through the Mediterranean to West Africa.

German bombing planes pounded at British shipping, air ports, harbors (including Plymouth and Portsmouth), arms factories, towns and countryside with steadily increasing fury. Casualties were mounting.

Big Italian bombers were reported taking off from all Fascist airbases to attack British air and naval objects after an official Fascist statement claimed severe damage to a British naval convoy in a continuation of the struggle for supremacy in the Mediterranean.

Six more German planes were shot down in the battle for Britain, making a total of 30 in two days and 106 since June 18, but the German high command claimed the effectiveness of its naval and air siege was demonstrated by a total of 4,329,213 tons of enemy shipping shipping sunk up to July 8. London dispatches disputed the Nazi claim and the average tonnage lost by Britain as still much below the record of the world war for a sustained period.

The nations of southeastern Europe appeared to be settling into comparative calm under orders of Adolf Hitler to delay solution of (Continued on Page Four)

Roosevelt May Call Militia

Intensive Training To Be Objective; Selective Draft Bill Is Urged

WASHINGTON, (AP)—President Roosevelt today decided to call up almost immediately four divisions of the National Guard for intensive training in modern warfare. The California National Guard is not included in the group to be called.

WASHINGTON, (AP)—President Roosevelt said today that he is considering calling up the National Guard for intensive training to strengthen the reserve defenses of the United States.

He revealed the possibility at a press conference attended by his new secretary of war, Henry L. Stimson. He planned an immediate talk with Stimson on the possibility of mobilizing the guard for training.

At the same time Gen. George C. Marshall, the chief of staff, told the senate military affairs committee that he would recommend immediate mobilization of the national guard if a compulsory military training bill is enacted.

Marshall advocated a form of compulsory military training which would give the regular army 335,000 men and build a mobilized national guard of 400,000.

The Burke-Wadsworth conscription bill would require the registration of all men between 18 and 65. Those between 21 and 45 would be subject to an eight-month training period on a selective draft basis. The remainder would be taught home defense.

The fire alarm Friday afternoon about 2 o'clock called firemen to a grass fire at the far end of North Broadway. The blaze burned briskly for a time but with the arrival of the firemen it was brought under control.

Job's Struggle to Faith in Life After Death

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for July 14 is Job 3-19, the Golden Text being Job 19:25, "As for me, I know that my Redeemer liveth.")

POOR JOB, suffering intensely in body and also in his mind by reason of his losses in property, and more especially from losing his beloved children, wondered why he had ever been born or allowed to live so long. He longed for death, where, he said, "the wicked ceased from troubling; and there the weary are at rest."

You remember at the end of last week's lesson, three friends came to where he lay and at first they did not recognize him because of the loathsome disease with which he was afflicted. When they did, they rent their mantles for grief, put dust in their hair, and sat beside him for seven days and seven nights, not speaking.

When they heard him complain of his lot and wish he were in his grave, they began to argue with him, one at a time. All were convinced that he would not have suffered his dreadful afflictions if he had not sinned. Eliphaz the Temanite, was the first to speak. "Remember, I pray thee," said he "who ever perished being innocent? or where were the righteous cut off?"

"Even as I have seen, they that plow iniquity, and sow wickedness, reap the same."

Tells of Ghostly Dream

It must have seemed very hard to Job, who had lived such a righteous life, to have his supposed friends blame him for all his troubles. They might just as well have told him, "It serves you right." He could not see the justice of such reasoning. Eliphaz even told him of a ghostly dream he had wherein "a spirit passed before my face, the hair of my flesh stood up:

"It stood still, but I could not discern the form thereof; an image was before mine eyes, there was silence, and I heard a voice saying,

"Shall mortal man be more just than God? shall a man be more pure than his Maker?"

He also reminded Job that "man is born to trouble as the sparks fly upward," all of which was not very comforting. Job could not see wherein he had erred and rebuked his friend by saying that after a suffering day "When I say, My bed shall ease my complaint; then thou scarest me with dreams, and terrifiest me with visions."

Bilad, the Shuhite, was the next one to speak, and he argued in much the same vein as had Eliphaz.

"If thou wert pure and upright; surely now He would awake for thee, and make the habitation of thy righteousness prosperous," he said, and much more in the same manner.

Poor Job answered him much as he had answered Eliphaz, and also addressed himself to God, asking where he had offended and what he should do. "I am full of confusion; therefore see Thou mine affliction," he mourned.

The third friend, Zophar, the Naamathite, then addressed him, and his accusations and arguments were rougher and far less considerate of his feelings than those of the other two. He even accused Job of lying and mockery.

"Should thy lies make men hold their peace? and when thou mockest, shall no man make thee ashamed?" he asked him. Can you imagine a good man visiting a friend who was poor, ill and had lost his children, and talking to him as this man talked to Job?

Job Grows Angry

Job, angered, answered them all sarcastically: "No doubt but ye are the people, and wisdom shall die with you."

"But I have understanding as well as you: I am not inferior to you: yea, who knoweth not such things as these?"

Eliphaz answered Job, reviling him, and Job turned on them all at last, saying: "I have heard many such things: miserable comforters are ye all."

Through his misery and the chidings of his supposed friends, poor suffering Job wailed: "they whom I loved have turned against me . . .

"Have pity upon me, have pity upon me, O ye my friends: for the hand of God hath touched me."

But even in this agony he struggled through to faith in God, and cried:

"I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that He shall stand at the latter day upon the earth."

"And though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God."

Thus Job, who suffered as few men are called upon to do, refrained from cursing his Maker, and fought through to faith in life after death.

Today's Sport Parade

By Henry McEmore

United Press Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, (U.P.)—Henry Armstrong, who is studying up to be a poet when he ends his career in the ring, probably is the most well read man of anyone fighting today. The shelves of his training camp room are lined with substantial volumes that not even Gene Tunney would mind being caught reading.

Unfortunately, there is one volume that seems to be missing. It's a book, too, that you think almost any prizefighter might like to have a look at. I refer to the Marquis of Queensberry's best-seller, which has to do with the rules that govern a battle of fists between two men. If ever there was a man who needed to sit down and absorb the contents of the Marquis' book that man is Armstrong. The little Negro welterweight champion is perhaps the most flagrant violator of the rules boxing has produced in years. Such roisterers as Tony Galento, Max Baer and Arturo Godoy are more violent in their disregard for the Marquis's stern admonitions, but they aren't as consistent as Henry.

Look back over his fights and you will find that he loses an average of three rounds a bout because of his refusal to follow the boxing code. True, this hasn't hurt him a great deal, because he has been so good that he has been able to spot most of his opponents three or four rounds. It did hurt him his last fight with Ambers, however, and it cost him a decision against Ceferino Garcia in Los Angeles last winter.

There is a good chance that four blows will weigh heavily against him when he fights Lew Jenkins, lightweight champion, in an overweight match at the Polo Grounds next Wednesday night. The judges in this state are pretty good at spotting the sort of things Armstrong does, and they will be particularly watchful of Henry against Jenkins. The crowd is almost certain to be for the Texan, because he is the smaller man, the under dog. By booing, the spectators will call attention to any disregard of the rules, and the referee cannot help but be influenced by this.

There are few rules Armstrong doesn't violate in the space of a 15-round bout. He is a fierce butler. His style of fighting calls for him to stay in close to his man, crowd him incessantly, and Henry is not particular how he does it. He hits low, too. I am not sure whether he means it or not, because his style calls for an almost incessant rain of blows. He throws these from all angles. A vicious infighter, Henry finds a great deal of use for his elbows and the backs of his gloves.

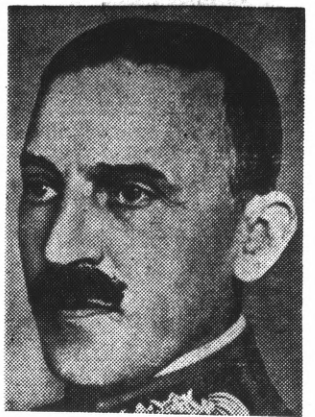

If he misses with a right he catches his man coming back with some part of his arm or glove.

It is too bad that Armstrong does not adhere more closely to the rules—his rough tactics form the only basis for criticism of him as a sportsman. Out of the ring he is quiet, modest, perfectly behaved. Armstrong could take a lesson from Joe Louis, the heavyweight champion. Louis has never violated a single item in the boxing code. This despite the fact that in at least six of his fights he was subjected to every violation known to man. This is one of the main reasons why Joe, even with his long string of successes, still is the favorite with the crowd.

For his own good Armstrong should stick to the rules next Wednesday. He is meeting a young, tough, on-the-upgrade fighter who figures to give him a full and hectic evening. He may well need every round he can possibly win.

basis for criticism of him as a sportsman. Out of the ring he is quiet, modest, perfectly behaved. Armstrong could take a lesson from Joe Louis, the heavyweight champion. Louis has never violated a single item in the boxing code. This despite the fact that in at least six of his fights he was subjected to every violation known to man. This is one of the main reasons why Joe, even with his long string of successes, still is the favorite with the crowd.

President

Jimmie Allen at the age of fourteen is President of his own business. He is symbolic of the thousands of youthful executives who will be the business leaders of tomorrow. They are the Presidents, Board of Directors, Treasurers, and General Managers of their own businesses.

They are Junior Merchants--Newspaper Merchants. Under the well-directed Business Training Programs, prepared for them by their newspapers, these young men are learning sound fundamental business procedure.

Already efficient executives today, these young men are being well prepared to be the business leaders of tomorrow.

'Building Better Manhood, Beginning in Boyhood'

MANSION OF FEAR

by Mildred Snow Gleason

Marcia Howards meets a handsome young doctor Larry Norton, on her way to Stiptown to join her father. Mr. Howards has bought a house, the large, forbidding looking Stips estate which Marcia dislikes immediately, feeling that there is something evil about the place. Then local carpenters refuse to work for Mr. Howards. One afternoon Larry is mysteriously attacked. The same night he receives a call from a curious black-bearded stranger. Dr. Ashton Brown who warns him of a mystery surrounding the Stips house. Larry thinks that Sidney Allstone, a wealthy man who practically controls the town, is responsible for all the trouble. Then Howards employs an Italian, Gigi, who comes asking for work. Gigi has worked in the house before and suggests that Howards will have need of someone he can trust. The day after the Howards move into the house, Marcia receives a warning to get out. That afternoon, Gigi has an accident. He confesses that he was searching the cellar for a secret room which he believes is there. He cannot explain how he received the small triangular cut in his forearm.

CHAPTER XVI

"I DON'T like all this mystery," Howards said gruffly. "I have half a notion, Marcia, to send you to the Eureka House for a few days, until we find out what this is all about. That note in your room this morning worries me."

"Yes," Larry agreed vigorously. The girl looked at the two men derisively. "Do you think I would leave Father here without me," she said firmly.

"For once," Howards said suddenly in a tone of voice she had not heard since she was a child, "I intend to be obeyed."

Marcia flushed. "Very well," she conceded after a slight pause. "I shall go to the Eureka House for tonight, but only for tonight. Is that plain?"

"Quite," Howards said, relieved to have gained that point with his headstrong young daughter so easily.

Larry, however, was surprised, and looked at her skeptically. Marcia returned his look with a sweet smile.

"Now," she said, "you may stay to dinner and run me in to town afterwards. In the meantime I'll pack what I need."

Larry was still wondering about her easy surrender when he drove her to the Eureka House. As they were saying goodnight he searched her face for some sign of rebellion, but Marcia's face was serene.

"I'm glad you decided to be sensible," he said at last, rather doubtfully.

"Oh, I can be very sensible at times," she assured him with a funny little smile. "Good night, Larry."

"Good night, Marcia."

HE PRESSED her hand and left reluctantly. Marcia went to her room. She laughed to herself as she sat down, glanced at her watch and picked up a book. The time dragged, and she couldn't keep her attention fixed on what she was reading. She sat back comfortably, her eyes sparkled mischievously. They thought they could get her out of the way, did they? She would show them—but what a core it was, waiting alone like this.

At midnight with a sigh of relief, she slipped on her heavy dark coat and pulled a black felt hat down low on her forehead. Then switching off the light, she stole softly into the dim corridor. Except for a loud snore coming from one of the rooms, there was no sound. With her shoes in her hand, so that she wouldn't make any noise, she slipped down the service stairs and out into the back alley. After putting on her shoes and looking around to make sure that no one had noticed her she set out, carefully avoiding the main street which was better lighted than the others.

SHE reached the road to Stips house without encountering anyone, but here it was very dark and eerie. The feeling of adventure, however, and a little of guilty joy in disobeying her father bolstered up her courage.

She walked carefully off the road in the border of trees so that she could avoid being seen if a car came along, but it was not easy going in the darkness and it took her more than a half hour to reach the gates to the house.

She was in a thoroughly bad temper by this time, having stubbed her toes and stumbled badly over a dozen roots, but a sudden thought restored her spirits. She remembered that her father did not bother to keep the gates locked, claiming that anyone determined to get into the grounds would not find it so difficult and that it was only a nuisance to invited guests. Marcia's spirits lifted. It would be easy for her to get in!

She went through the gates, remembering to shut them behind her, and then leaving the gravel driveway she slowly worked up towards the house. The trees were thick and had not yet lost their leaves so that it was very dark. She crept along a few feet at a time, trying not to make a noise. Nearing the house she noticed that not a light shone. Apparently everyone had gone to bed.

NERVOUS for fear of stepping on a twig, she made her way around to where she could keep watch on the cellar window. Keep watch for what? For the first time she felt rather childish, and shivered a little in the cold, longing for a nice, warm bed.

Suddenly she held her breath a chill of excitement creeping up her spine. Someone was standing quite near her. She could feel rather than see him.

She flattened herself against the trunk of the tree, her heart thumping. For the first time she felt fear. At that instant, shifting her weight a trifle a twisp snapped under her foot. A second later she felt a hand on her arm and another hand closed over her mouth stifling her instinctive scream. For a second she remained paralyzed. Then she began to struggle with a sickening desperation but there was no escaping from that iron grip!

There is relief through the Red Cross.

Already Red Cross food supplies are beginning to be distributed in France from abroad, raising a difficult problem for Great Britain. France has been declared hostile territory by the British government, since Germany is using French territory and French supplies as aids in efforts to compel British capitulation. Food reaching France through any agency whatsoever is of important assistance to Germany since it allows the Germans to seize that much more of France's domestic crops for the use of the German people.

WPA ROLLS BEING CHECKED FOR MEN ELIGIBLE FOR VOCATIONAL TRAINING IN WAR DEFENSE INDUSTRIES

SAN FRANCISCO — The Work Projects Administration' Northern California employment division today began setting up machinery to interview WPA project workers and eligible persons on the agency's employment lists to determine their qualifications for state vocational school instruction in this region.

The project is being opened to train enrollees for manual occupations in industries engaged in production for National defense purposes, Work Projects Administrator William R. Lawson said.

Those to be selected, now are listed on the WPA roles is four groups, unskilled, intermediate, skilled and professional and technical workers.

Lawson also revealed that Washington had allocated $165,000 to northern California to provide three months instruction for 2,500 persons in such schools.

It is expected that actual instruction for the first group of trainees will begin in about ten days. Additional courses, it was pointed out, will be opened as rapidly as provision can be made for them in the vocational training schools located in the larger Northern California cities.

According to Lawson, 1,000 of the trainees will be drawn from San Francisco, 1,000 from Alameda and Contra Costa counties and the remaining 500 from other sections of the state.

"Enrollment is purely voluntary," the WPA administrator explained. "Trainees selected from our available file, but who are not now working, will be paid at the unskilled wage rate, irrespective of the classifications on our records. On the other hand, those selected from our projects will receive the same scale of pay at which they are currently employed."

"Courses will be conducted to train persons for manual occupation in industries engaged in production for national defense purposes, including courses supplementary to employment in occupations essential to national defense and pre-employment refresher courses for workers preparing for such occupations."

"In making its selections of persons eligible for training, our employment division will take into consideration their previous training, in the same or related fields, their adaptability to the field of training under consideration, or their desire for such training."

"Additional factors will include: 'Experience in mass production industries, even though it may not have required a high degree of skill; in the use of machine or hand tools; in farm mechanics, such as the repair and maintenance of farm machinery; and at skills and occupations requiring mechanical dexterity.'"

"School authorities will have the right to reject assigned trainees at the time of reporting, or later, if inaptitude in training is revealed. In such an event, we will supply replacements from our eligible lists.

"Instruction for the trainees will be provided by members of the staffs of the state vocational training schools," he concluded.

THE BOOK MARK

eration of tradesmen. They talked to many of them, not as specimens, but as one human being to another concerned with what lay ahead. Perhaps the worst disaster that has happened to England is a state of mind, that habit of thought based on a world that has almost vanished completely, whose earmarks were a contemptuous disdain for the present and a tremendous reverence for the past. With eyes fastened only on their own firesides and on their own sacred Sunday joints, the great bulk of the middle class saw only the flaws in other countries when they chose to look in their direction which was not often. They were firm in the belief that all good things could be found only on English soil and nowhere else. Under these circumstances, it was natural that exploration for new paths leading to new conquests of the spirit would be impossible.

There are other more obvious reasons for England's decline. By her own experts, England is rated third or as a "C" nation in health conditions among the nations of Europe. Yet the people pay no heed to the warning and are satisfied to remain in the rut of "the British way of doing things."

It is sometimes assumed that the educated Britisher and the educated American speak the same thought language but the Lohrkes believe that this is not possible today until the Britisher surmounts the barriers of inherited prejudice. Essentially, what is England's problem? It is not so much whether she can win a war and survive it but whether she can change, whether she can meet and overcome the dead weight of stagnation. And how does America enter into England's problem? That question is answered in many ways, ways that will stimulate the reader to think things out for himself. Though you may disagree with the book in part, it is thought-inducing. There is a challenge in it to face certain issues. And, moreover, if you should be interested in knowing what good writing is today, you will find it in the flawless prose in which this book is written.

died ten years ago. The defendant had left school at the fourth grade, has no relatives, and during the years has been a self-confessed "bum." He declared he had never been in serious trouble before and an investigation by the probation officer failed to reveal any evidence that he had been.

After all circumstances had been placed before the court, Judge George H. Thompson said that "under all the circumstances" it appeared probation might be advisable. Passing of sentence then was suspended and probation imposed as noted.

DANIELS PLEADS GUILTY; 30-DAY COUNTY JAIL TERM IMPOSED

Clifford Daniels, whom his wife, Mary Kramp Daniels had charged with taking her car without her permission, withdrew his denial of guilt and entered a guilty plea before Judge George H. Thompson Friday morning.

The court imposed a thirty-day jail sentence.

District Attorney Henry S. Lyon stated to the court that in his opinion the case is one in which leniency would be justified and defense counsel Attorney J. D. Elliot, who had been appointed to his duty by the court, explained that he had learned that Daniels had been using the car "right along" and had learned that after taking the car to Sacramento, the defendant had telegraphed his wife, telling her where the car might be found.

"BUCK BENNY RIDES AGAIN" EMPIRE OFFERING FOR SUNDAY, MONDAY

It's a hard riding, straight-shooting, two-fisted Jack Benny—a mighty tough hombre, who appears in "Buck Benny Rides Again," the newest screen vehicle of the famous film and radio comedian, which Paramount will present on Sunday and Monday at the Empire Theatre.

Wild Bill Hickok and Billy the Kid were tenderfeet by comparison with the rip-snorting buckaroo, the terror of the plains, the mad man of the west, Buck Benny of Bar None.

It's a new dynamic Benny, with a scowl on his face and a glint in his eye—a hero to everyone except his valet, who happens to be Rochester. Rustlers quail at his approach—they were paid to quail and they earned their money. Redmen cower, and raise their hands furiously to their own scalps—the tribes were scourged for braves who really knew how to cower in a pinch. Buck Benny rules the range—through extensive bribery.

For "Buck Benny Rides Again" tells the story of a harmless, profane radio performer, Jack Benny played by himself, who discovers that his girl friend adores the West, and the only way to win her is to make like Hopalong Cassidy.

With the aid of Andy Devine, Benny is enabled to pose as a rancher of the old school. He pays Andy's cowhands to pose as bandits, so that he can put them to rout. He bribes them to let him bully them in badman style. Everything works out until Benny, who hates horses, is forced to mount one of the diabolical animals for the roundup. His performance on horseback gives the show away, but he redeems himself—if accidentally—when genuine bandits appear on the scene.

their quarrels until after the battle for Britain. Hungary sent many thousands of her soldiers back to the fields to produce food—presumably at Hitler's stern suggestion.

Rumania clamped down on the British-controlled oil resources to prevent reduction of the fuel supply going to the Nazi war machine. Berlin reported that the Bulgarian army leaders, including part of the general staff, would confer at the German capital this week-end.

Turkey's premier, Refik Saydam, got a vote of confidence from the national assembly at Ankara after expressing confidence that the nation could maintain a peaceful position.

Almost every development in Europe pointed toward a further steady increase in the German-Italian offensive against Britain, which fought back with bombardment of German bases in France and the low countries and fierce counterattacks on the Nazi aerial armada swarming over the British Isles.

Says Champion Golfer Joe Plunk,
Whose playing at first was the bunk:
"Since I've stuck to RAINIER
For my 19th Hole CHEER,
My scores have amazingly shrunk!"

A couple of bottles of Rainier Club Extra Pale waiting in the locker room is incentive enough for any golfer to hit 'em far and straight, so he can get to the clubhouse quicker.

In less than a year and a half, Rainier Club has become the favorite of thousands and thousands of westerners. Try a cold bottle today—savor its unequalled flavor, light but definite, and its sparkling, zesty tang—and you'll see why it's selling way over a million bottles a month.
